"Sir," said the gentleman, "allow me to present my young brother."

"Aye! and your good looking brother" said one near. "Not so" said the President, "its very near a tie between you, and you both carry your certificate of health on your faces." At this moment conductor George Bourdette, sung out all aboard, and some enthusiastic man in the crowd sung out, "three cheers for the President of the United States," and amid the martial strains of music and the cheering of the crowd, the cars started and passed rapidly on to Suffolk—here there was a crowd at the Depot and a number of persons were presented to the President; indeed, not only here was this the case, but at every stopping place along the line did eager crowds collect to see the President of the United States.

"What sort of a trip had you down the Bay, Mr. President?" enquired a gentleman from the Old North State, while riding down the road. "Well, sir, the boat is most excellently managed, and the trip, with one exception, was a most delightful one."

"Ah! what was the exception?" "Well, sir," said the President, "either I was too long, or the births were too short, and I did not sleep as comfortable as I might."

This remark was overheard by the President of the Bay Line, who instantly replied: " No, no, Mr. President, the reason you could not sleep was because you were in the " Bridal Chamber." and as this is the first time in your life that you occu-

Ex-Governor Bragg now introduced Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Interior; he comes among you to revisit the scenes of his youth, and to kneel once again at the shrine of his mother, the old North State.

Mr. Thompson responded briefly and eloquently; his heart was filled with gratitude at the kind and hearty welcome his Captain and himself had received; he felt grateful to a people who, for nearly two centuries, had kept vigils over the ashes of his ancestors, and while it had been his fate to find favor under the light of another star of this great confederacy, he had always carried with him a true and loyal North Carolina heart. The speaking being over the band played another national air, while the people crowded around to grasp the hand of the President, and we doubt not his right arm was tired when he got through, for hundreds availed themselves of the privilege.
